Law is but the means, justice is the end.

The Georgetown Experience

Combining a world-renowned faculty, a dedication to intellectual stimulation and community, and a location in the heart of the nation's capital, Georgetown is a unique place to study law.

T. ALEXANDER ALEINIKOFF
DEAN

"Georgetown's long-term goal is to educate students to be superb lawyers who will promote justice and serve others in their legal practices and in their lives. That mission is fulfilled by offering students a welcoming, vibrant community, an accessible and talented faculty, and an educational experience geared to the whole person."

LEGAL EDUCATION IN ITS FULLEST SENSE

Georgetown University Law Center seeks not only to impart the tools of the lawyer's trade, but also to foster reflection and inquiry into the nature of law and the role and responsibility of lawyers in a global society. The goal is education in its fullest sense—not only mastery of "black letter law," but a sense of the philosophical political, social and ethical dimensions of law, the awakening of an abiding curiosity about its nature and purposes, and the instilling of a sense of responsibility for its development and direction.

A DYNAMIC INTELLECTUAL COMMUNITY

Georgetown nurtures the very highest standards of scholarly inquiry, intellectual rigor and ethical behavior, in a way that respects each student's individuality and fosters his or her particular interests and career goals. The result is a dynamic intellectual community, in which students have an unprecedented range of academic opportunities both inside and outside the classroom.

A UNIQUE VANTAGE POINT

Located in Washington, D.C., within blocks of the U.S. Congress that enacts laws, the Supreme Court that interprets them, and the administrative agencies that enforce them, Georgetown provides a unique vantage point from which its faculty and students explore the dynamic legal processes of our nation and world.

Curriculum

James Forman, Jr

Professor of Law

"I was coming up the front steps my first day, and I saw the banner saying, 'Law is but the means, Justice is the end.' Seeing that as what the school stood for was really important to me. The school really embraces that philosophy. It's a way of being."

Unparalleled Depth and Breadth

Curriculum

With more than 125 full time faculty, Georgetown is able to offer the most comprehensive legal curriculum in the nation: more than 350 courses and seminars, in disciplines ranging from constitutional law to intellectual property to international and comparative law.

MALCOLM WILKERSON

CLASS OF 2010

BS, U.S. Military Academy
West Point

"One of the things I love about Georgetown is the breadth of courses (879 by last count) and the focus on new ideas. While some of my peers knew exactly what type of law they wanted to practice and how they wanted to plan out their curriculum, I took a liberal approach to course selection. After taking everything from Family Law to National Security and the Law of the Sea, I discovered that I had a passion for public international law. With the assistance of my International Law I professor, I obtained a summer assignment in the Secretary of Defense's International Affairs legal shop and will continue pursuing a curriculum heavily influenced by international law in my third year, including such classes as the Law of '24' (based on the popular television show) and Managing National Security Law."

SMALL CLASS SETTINGS

One of the benefits of Georgetown's sweeping curriculum and large faculty is that students have many opportunities to take small classes, permitting them to work closely with distinguished faculty members. All first year students have a small section class of about 28 students, and an even smaller Legal Research and Writing seminar of about 15 students. In their upperclass years, students may choose each term from dozens of small seminars, most of which enroll 20 or fewer students. Many students also choose to pursue individual research and writing projects under the direct supervision of a faculty member.

AN INNOVATIVE FIRST YEAR CURRICULUM

Unlike many other law schools, Georgetown offers first year students welcome choices in their course of study. The first option, Curriculum "A," provides a thorough grounding in the foundation subjects—civil procedure, contracts, constitutional law, constitutional criminal procedure, property and torts—while enabling students to select from a diverse menu of ten "perspective" elective courses in the spring semester. The second option, Curriculum "B," covers the traditional subjects offered in Curriculum "A," but takes an interdisciplinary approach, placing emphasis on the public nature of law and the sources of law in economics, philosophy and other social sciences.

Another exciting innovation to its first year curriculum is Week One: Law in a Global Context. Drawing on Georgetown's unparalleled international law faculty, this new program engages all first year students in an interdisciplinary study of cutting-edge transnational legal issues during the first week of the spring term.

Faculty

Robert Enayati

Class of 2009 | BA, UC Berkeley

"I really feel like the faculty care about using their knowledge and experience in their areas of expertise to help grow my personal academic interests and career goals. I worked one-on-one with one professor to write a significant independent paper on issues relating to consumer protection, and I worked with another professor to publish a note in bankruptcy and do empirical research on the current credit crisis. Our relationships have continued long past these endeavors, constantly emailing each other with articles and commentary on these pertinent issues."

World Class

Faculty

The Faculty share the desire to help students learn how to view each legal issue from the broadest intellectual and social perspective. They are committed to helping every student develop the habits of mind that are characteristic of the best lawyers.

ARI MELTZER

CLASS OF 2010

BA, University of Southern California

"What is great about the faculty at Georgetown is not only that the professors are some of the leading scholars in their field, but also that they are really eager to work with students. The professors at Georgetown really take their teaching seriously and that makes a big difference for the overall student experience. My first semester at Georgetown, one of our professors took us out in small groups for pizza. It was a small gesture, but it set a tone that I have found throughout that the professors really are interested in students."

A DIVERSE AND DISTINGUISHED FACULTY

The Georgetown University Law Center faculty is the largest and one of the most distinguished communities of scholar-teachers in legal education today. The faculty encompasses an extraordinary range of professional and scholarly accomplishments in virtually every area of legal practice.

Preeminent in the fields of constitutional, international and tax law, as well as clinical legal education, Georgetown's faculty also is distinguished in bioethics, civil rights, corporate law, environmental law, family law, health law, jurisprudence, legal history, legislation and litigation.

The women and men who teach law to first year students have achieved national or international prominence in their own specialized fields of interest. Their wide-ranging scholarly interests and ongoing work in the public arena enable the faculty to offer students a wealth of upperclass courses and advanced seminars that provide an intellectually exciting, rigorous and up-to-date education.

Georgetown's 125-plus full time professors are joined by a wide array of distinguished Washington, D.C., practitioners — judges, general counsel, law firm partners, agency chiefs and Congressional staff members — who bring together the theory and the application of law as it is made and practiced in everyday life.

Mark Aziz

Class of 2009 | BA, YALE

"Through the Center for Applied Legal Studies, my clinic partner and I represented an Ethiopian refugee in the asylum process. We solicited affidavits (and other evidence) from Eritrea and Ethiopia, wrote the legal brief submitted to the Baltimore Immigration Court, and argued the case before the Chief Judge of the Baltimore Immigration Court. We were thrilled when the Chief Judge praised our efforts and granted our client asylum! Not only did the clinic allow us to develop valuable advocacy and general legal skills, but it also gave us the opportunity to change someone's life. It was truly an experience I'll never forget."

Extraordinary Opportunities

Clinics

A pioneer in clinical legal education, Georgetown has developed a top-ranked program that now offers 13 clinical courses. Nearly 300 students participate in the clinical program each year, where they gain first-hand insight into the strategic and ethical dimensions of legal practice.

APPELLATE LITIGATION CLINIC

The clinic includes both civil and criminal cases involving federal agencies.

CENTER FOR APPLIED LEGAL STUDIES

Students represent refugees seeking political asylum in the U.S.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE CLINIC

Students represent defendants in misdemeanor cases in the D.C. Superior Court and residents of the Lorton prison in post-conviction matters.

D.C. LAW STUDENTS IN COURT

A unique consortium of five law schools whose students provide quality legal representation and counseling to low-income clients.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE CLINIC

Students represent victims of family abuse in D.C. Superior Court.

FEDERAL LEGISLATION CLINIC

Designed to teach students how to become effective legislative lawyers by undertaking projects that advance the public interest.

HARRISON INSTITUTE FOR PUBLIC LAW – HOUSING AND COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT CLINIC

Provides legal services for multifamily housing, economic opportunity and micro-enterprise, and community institution building.

HARRISON INSTITUTE FOR PUBLIC LAW – POLICY CLINIC

Serves legislators, public officials and nonprofit organizations that actively pursue economic and social reform.

INSTITUTE FOR PUBLIC REPRESENTATION

Works in the areas of communications law, environmental law, civil rights and general public interest matters.

INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S HUMAN RIGHTS CLINIC

Works with UN and non-governmental organizations to promote and advance women's human rights throughout the world.

JUVENILE JUSTICE CLINIC

Provides legal representation to adolescents charged with committing misdemeanors or felonies.

STREET LAW HIGH SCHOOLS

Links approximately 24 law school students with D.C. public high schools, where the law students teach a year-long course at D.C. public high schools.

STREET LAW IN THE COMMUNITY

Law students teach a semester-long course in practical law offered to adult learners one evening each week in a community setting.

Public Interest

More Georgetown graduates go into public interest and government service each year than those of any other law school. Because Washington, D.C., is the heart of the nation's public interest community, Georgetown students have access to hundreds of legal internship opportunities with non-profit organizations and the federal and local governments.

SAIRA AMIR

CLASS OF 2011

BS, Georgia Institute of Technology

"It has been a pleasure to be involved with OPICS at Georgetown. The staff is welcoming, knowledgeable, and they have guided me to some wonderful volunteer opportunities where I have put my legal education into practice. Participating in public interest work is a great way to strike a balance amidst all the classes and studying, as well as keep life as a student in perspective."

OFFICE OF PUBLIC INTEREST AND COMMUNITY SERVICE

The Office of Public Interest and Community Service (OPICS) advises students on public interest careers and supports a vast array of public interest activities and programs, including a first year public interest mentor program, public interest career advising and many student-run volunteer activities.

OPICS promotes and facilitates student pro bono activity, placing students with organizations in need of volunteers and assisting student groups with their own community service projects.

www.law.georgetown.edu/opics/

PUBLIC INTEREST LAW SCHOLARS (PILS)

The Public Interest Law Scholars program provides financial and other support to eight students each year who demonstrate a commitment to spend most of their careers in public service.

www.law.georgetown.edu/clinics/pils/

LOAN REPAYMENT ASSISTANCE PROGRAM (LRAP)

The Law Center's loan repayment assistance program, one of the strongest in the country, provides Georgetown Law graduates in qualifying positions, such as public interest law or public service, with assistance with the repayment of law school loans.

International and Joint Degree Programs

The Law Center is widely recognized as one of the foremost institutions of international and comparative law in the world. The respected faculty's international scholarship is supplemented by extensive experience working with governmental, private and international organizations, and an extraordinary adjunct faculty who enrich the curriculum with specialized courses.

NINA PILLARD
PROFESSOR OF LAW
CTLS CO-DIRECTOR

"Where else but at CTLS can you hear so many different perspectives in every class? During the Center's inaugural semester, we had students from more than ten nations, taught by faculty from Italy, Chile, Canada, Sri Lanka, the U.S. Brazil, Australia, and Israel. Every other law school in the world focuses on the law of its home country, with international subjects taught against that backdrop. At CTLS, however, no single country is the norm, and everything we do is about comparative, international, or transnational law. It has revolutionized the way I think about the law."

CENTER FOR TRANSNATIONAL LEGAL STUDIES

In the increasingly globalized economy of the 21st Century, lawyers need to understand law transnationally, across different legal systems and cultures. Lawyers graduating today are likely to confront legal problems and opportunities that will take them beyond the borders of their home countries.

In the 2008/09 academic year, Georgetown University Law Center opened a first-of-its-kind Center for Transnational Legal Studies (CTLS) in the heart of London's legal quarter. The program brings together faculty and students from ten of the world's premier law schools to study transnational legal issues in a multicultural and transnational setting.

www.ctls.georgetown.edu

GLOBAL BUSINESS LAW PROGRAM

Each year, two full time J.D. students may study in Paris as part of a special one-year Global Business Law Program. The Program is co-sponsored by Institut d'Etudes Politiques de Paris (Sciences Po) and Université Paris I (Sorbonne). At the end of their one-year study in France, the students will be awarded a Master's in Global Economics Law.

www.law.georgetown.edu/otp/SciencesPoandParisI.htm

LONDON SUMMER PROGRAM

Many J.D. students choose to participate in the Law Center's intensive and academically rigorous Summer Abroad Program. Courses are taught by professors from the Law Center, University College London, and King's College London, and focus on comparative legal issues. The program includes visits to the Royal Courts of Justice, the Central Criminal Court, and the Inns of Court.

INTERNATIONAL INTERNSHIPS

The International Summer Internship Program provides opportunities for Georgetown Law Center students to work abroad with practicing lawyers in law firms, corporations and government organizations. Last year, over 106 students were placed in at least 95 different organizations in 38 countries spanning six continents. Opportunities are available worldwide, from South America to Europe and Asia.

www.law.georgetown.edu/career/intlint.cfm

SEMESTER ABROAD PROGRAM

This program is designed to offer students a variety of semester abroad opportunities in which the students will be immersed in a foreign culture, studying transnational, international, and/or foreign law at one of several outstanding law schools in Europe, Latin America and Asia. This allows students to develop international and transnational legal perspectives, as well as to prepare themselves for careers that will take them beyond the borders of the United States.

www.law.georgetown.edu/otp/semesterabroad.htm

GLOBAL LAW SCHOLARS

The Global Law Scholars program prepares students for transnational practice in which they regularly encounter problems that involve more than one legal system. The aim is to combine language skills and cultural familiarity with rigorous and directed legal training so that the Scholars are ready to practice in the global legal environment of the 21st century. Approximately 20 Scholars are selected each year.

www.law.georgetown.edu/gls/

JOINT DEGREES

To support and encourage those students who may desire or require additional training in a companion discipline outside the law, Georgetown University Law Center sponsors several joint and dual degree programs. Students in these programs may concurrently pursue studies leading to the awarding of the Juris Doctor degree from the Law Center and a graduate or doctoral degree in a second concentration.

Please refer to the website for a more complete description of the joint degree programs and application process.

Institutes, Centers and Scholarly Initiatives

Georgetown supports many leading faculty institutes, centers, and initiatives that produce great scholarship. Through hosting numerous lectures, conferences and symposia throughout the year, Georgetown plays a role in shaping public policy and debate. And students join faculty in writing papers and presenting conferences.

Student Life

Richard Atkins

Class of 2012 | BA, MD Stanford

"The first year at Georgetown is tough, especially for me, as I have been away from an academic learning environment for about thirty years. But, the need to study is something you don't forget, and sharing learning with classmates who accept my being quite diverse from other members of the class has made it a good communal experience."

Life-changing Experiences

Career counselors in the Office of Career Services (OCS) are available for one-on-one consultation throughout students' job search process, from the first summer internship to a full time job upon graduation. Students are also offered an extensive series of career programs throughout the year.

JESSICA SHEER

CLASS OF 2009

BA, University of Maryland

"When I started law school I wasn't sure what I wanted to do on the other side. Georgetown gave me the opportunity to explore a wide variety of career options — I didn't even have to leave campus to interview for jobs with an international agency, a large law firm, or my job post-graduation, working for the federal government. Each of those experiences refined my goals and my approach to the law, and ultimately helped me find the career path that was right for me. For someone who came to law school swearing she didn't want to be a lawyer, that's a pretty big feat."

More than 800 employers from 115 cities in the U.S. and abroad come to the campus to interview Georgetown Law students each year. Upperclass students have the opportunity to interview with private sector employers through an intensive Early Interview Week, which allows students to conduct screening interviews with minimum disruption of their course work. Georgetown regularly ranks first among law schools in the number of graduates who go into public interest and government service.

"Georgetown Law School's location is ideal. Nestled between the U.S. Capitol, the U.S. Supreme Court, and the dozens of courthouses that make up Judiciary Square, Georgetown Law's location enables unparalleled externship and networking opportunities. It also means that visits and talks by the U.S. Supreme Court justices and politicians are a regular occurrence!"

A CAMPUS FOR THE 21ST CENTURY

The five-building campus has lecture halls, two libraries, apartments for students, health care facilities, and a child care center. The campus has state-of-the-art classroom facilities and a Moot Court Auditorium modeled after the U.S. Supreme Court. The library is the third-largest law library in the country with more than one million volumes and 9,920 serial subscriptions. The apartments have a moot courtroom, student lounges, and an elegant 12th-floor lounge and terrace with a panoramic view of the city. The free-standing Sport and Fitness Center provides students with three stories of facilities including a swimming pool, cardiovascular equipment and free weights, aerobics and spinning studios, racquetball courts and a full-sized basketball/volleyball court. Downstairs, students gather around the café to chat or study on comfortable couches near warm fireplaces and a peaceful indoor fountain.

The Law Center buildings are wired for the 21st century. In addition to the Law Center's wireless network, there are more than 1,600 laptop ports available to students and 45 public computers for student use, with more added each year.

Student Life

A SUPPORTIVE ENVIRONMENT

FIRST YEAR ORIENTATION—A YEAR-LONG JOURNEY

Georgetown is committed to helping students make the most of their law school experience. Starting the week before classes, First Year Orientation introduces the students to the Law Center and includes faculty talks, tours of D.C., public service projects, and other student social activities. Unlike most schools, Georgetown's orientation continues during the first year with programs on selection of courses, studying for exams, and more.

OFFICE OF DEAN OF STUDENTS

The Office of the Dean of Students oversees student life at Georgetown Law. ODOS focuses on issues affecting the student community and acts as the primary liaison between students, faculty and the administration. It offers students a broad range of opportunities and services including leadership training, volunteer opportunities, personal advising and student organization advising.

www.law.georgetown.edu/odos/

SPIRITUAL LIFE

Georgetown's Catholic and Jesuit heritage is part of its distinctive quality. In keeping with its respect for all faiths, Georgetown welcomes students of all religious beliefs. Catholic, Jewish, Muslim and Protestant chaplains have offices at the Law Center.

TRAINING IN LAW AND LEADERSHIP

PUBLICATIONS AND SCHOLARSHIP

Georgetown University Law Center publishes ten legal journals annually. The central mission in publication is to provide timely and relevant scholarly articles, student notes, and comments pertaining to areas of professional legal interest. Nine journals address specific areas: criminal law, international environmental law, immigration, international law, legal ethics, poverty, gender and the law, tax law, and conservative, libertarian and natural law scholarship..

MOOT COURT, MOCK TRIAL AND ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION (ADR)

Georgetown has a long and rich tradition in appellate and trial advocacy. Georgetown's moot court appellate teams have long enjoyed an outstanding national and international reputation, having won first place in many of the most prestigious competitions. Recently, ADR competitions were added to the numerous Georgetown-sponsored regional and national moot court and mock trial competitions. These competitions involve negotiations, mediation and client counseling. The student-run Barristers' Council administers both inter-school and intramural competitions and activities. Students who participate in this program improve their legal research, writing and oral advocacy skills.

"I can't think of a better place than DC in which to study law. The proximity of the Supreme Court to Georgetown's campus makes it all but impossible to graduate without at least once witnessing the creation of the basis of our curriculum."

A VIBRANT URBAN SETTING

From the White House to the National Mall, Georgetown Law is surrounded by a rich world of culture and law. Within a fifteen block radius one can find the Federal Trade Commission, Securities and Exchange Commission, U.S. Tax Court, U.S. District Court, U.S. Capitol and U.S. Supreme Court. It is a ten minute walk from campus to the National Mall — home to the National Gallery of Art and Smithsonian Museums of Natural History, American History, and Air and Space — and special events such as the Folklife and Cherry Blossom Festivals. The Kennedy Center, which hosts the National Symphony as well as performances in opera, ballet and theatre, Arena Stage, Wolf Trap National Park for the Performing Arts and historical Ford's Theatre are all a short distance away. For nature lovers, the National Arboretum, Botanical Gardens and national Great Falls Park are nearby along with numerous jogging and biking trails along the Potomac River. Sports aficionados, who want to see the Washington Wizards (basketball) or Washington Capitals (hockey), will appreciate that the Verizon Center is only a five minute walk. The city also has a lively nightlife scene, with many clubs, music venues and restaurants close to the Law Center in neighborhoods like Dupont and Adams Morgan. So whether you choose to stroll down Embassy Row, visit the National Cathedral, see the pandas at the National Zoo, or just enjoy being in one of the most powerful cities in the world, there is much to see and do in Washington.

WHO MAY APPLY

Only applicants who possess a baccalaureate degree from an accredited college or university are eligible for admission to Georgetown Law as candidates for the degree of Juris Doctor (JD), or any of the joint JD degree programs.

HOW ARE FILES EVALUATED

The Admissions Committee takes into consideration a number of factors in evaluating whether a candidate would be suitable for admission. These factors include whether the person is likely to succeed at Georgetown, would benefit from a legal education here, and could contribute to the Georgetown legal community.

In making such determinations, the Committee focuses on a number of criteria and does not use numerical cut-offs. In addition to examining the applicant's LSAT score(s) and academic record, the Committee also considers the personal statement, letters of recommendations, choice of major, nature and difficulty of course selection, extracurricular activities, graduate work, contributions to the community and professional experience.

TIMETABLE

In view of the large number of applicants and our rolling admissions process, candidates are urged to complete their files as early in the fall as possible.

In order to allow the Admissions Office sufficient time to process all applications, Applications for Fall 2010 may be submitted as early as September 21. As the Admissions Committee employs a rolling admissions system, it is to your advantage to complete your application as early as possible. Applications are considered beginning in November and candidates are notified as soon as decisions are reached, usually eight to twelve weeks after a file is complete with all supporting documentation. If your file is complete by February 1, you will receive a decision by April 15.

HOW TO APPLY

Georgetown Law strongly encourages applicants to apply electronically. JD Applicants who apply to Georgetown Law electronically must use the LSDAS Electronic Application system, available on the Law School Admissions Council (LSAC) website at www.lsac.org or through our website.

All applicants applying electronically must pay the required application fee using a credit card. Applicants who prefer to complete a paper application or pay by check may submit the application and supplementary forms available for download on our website at www.law.georgetown.edu/admissions.

CHOICE OF APPLICATION PROCESS

Please select only one of the following options:

1. Early Decision (Binding)

The Early Decision process is designed for those who have already researched their law school options and are certain that Georgetown Law is their first choice of schools. This process allows such applicants a means of expressing to the Admissions Committee their commitment to attend Georgetown, if admitted. Any candidate for whom receipt of institutional financial aid is a prerequisite for enrolling should apply under the Regular Decision process (see below for details), rather than Early Decision. Early Decision applications are given priority review in our rolling admissions process.

Early Decision is binding. Because offers of admission extended under the Early Decision process are binding, candidates may not apply to other law schools under similar Early Decision processes. However, if your application is deferred or denied, you are no longer bound by Georgetown Law's Early Decision commitment and are encouraged to proceed with your applications at other law schools. With Georgetown's rolling admissions process, Early Decision applicants receive the best consideration. Georgetown encourages all applicants to apply as early as possible.

ED Timeline

Please be certain to complete the "Early Decision" application, which indicates your intention to apply under this process.

Please note: This year we have changed the timeline for our Early Decision Process. For those who choose to apply under the previously published timeline, if your application is complete with all required documentation (including application form and fee and personal statement, letter(s) of recommendation, resume, etc.) by December 1, your decision letter will be mailed by December 15. To receive a decision by December 15, you must have taken the LSAT by October 2009.

For all others who wish to apply Early Decision, your application must be complete with all required documentation (including application form and fee and personal statement, letter(s) of recommendation, resume, etc.) by March 1. Your decision letter will be mailed within 3 weeks of when your application becomes complete.

2. Regular Decision

The Admissions Committee continues reviewing applications on a rolling basis, as applications are completed with all required supplemental information. Thus, even within the Regular Decision process, it is to your advantage to complete your application as early as possible.

Timeline

The final application deadlines are February 1 for those applying to the Full-time Division, and March 1 for applicants to the Part-time Division. Candidates are notified as soon as decisions are reached, usually ten to twelve weeks after your file is complete with all supporting documentation.

APPLICATION FOR ADMISSION

This is the basic document required to initiate an application. JD candidates may apply to be considered for admission to the Full-time Division, the Part-time Division, or Both. Applying to both divisions signifies to the Admissions Committee that you are equally willing to attend either the Full-time or Part-time program if offered admission to Georgetown Law. If the Admissions Committee approves your application, it will specify in your acceptance letter the division to which you are admitted.

APPLICATION FEE

Please include the $80.00 application fee payable to Georgetown University Law Center with your application. Online applicants must use a credit card.

Fee Waivers: Either apply for a fee waiver using the form on our website or include a copy of LSAC's fee waiver approval.

LSDAS/TRANSCRIPTS

All applicants must register with Law School Data Assembly Service (LSDAS) at the LSAC address given below. A transcript from each college or university attended must then be sent directly to LSDAS, not to Georgetown Law.

Council (LSAC)

FOREIGN EDUCATED APPLICANTS

Candidates who have either a) received their undergraduate degree from an institution outside the United States or b) were directly enrolled at a foreign institution(s) and the total amount of work completed at all foreign institutions combined is the equivalent of more than one year of undergraduate study in the U.S., its territories, or Canada, are required to use the JD Credential Assembly Service (CAS) as part of their LSDAS report.

LSAT

All applicants for admission to Georgetown Law are required to take the Law School Admission Test (LSAT). All candidates for Fall 2010 admission must have taken the LSAT on or after June 2005. Although we will accept the February 2010 LSAT, taking an earlier exam is strongly encouraged. Further information can be obtained by contacting LSAC at the address above.

PERSONAL STATEMENT

An applicant may write a double-spaced personal statement on any subject of importance that he or she feels will assist the Admissions Committee in its decision. There is no minimum/maximum length.

RESUME

Please prepare a resume describing: 1) schools attended, dates of attendance, and degree(s) awarded; 2) work experience, including employer, position, nature, of work and dates of employment; 3) extracurricular/community activities, including nature and length of involvement; and 4) scholastic honors including academic awards, scholarships or fellowships.

RECOMMENDATION(S)

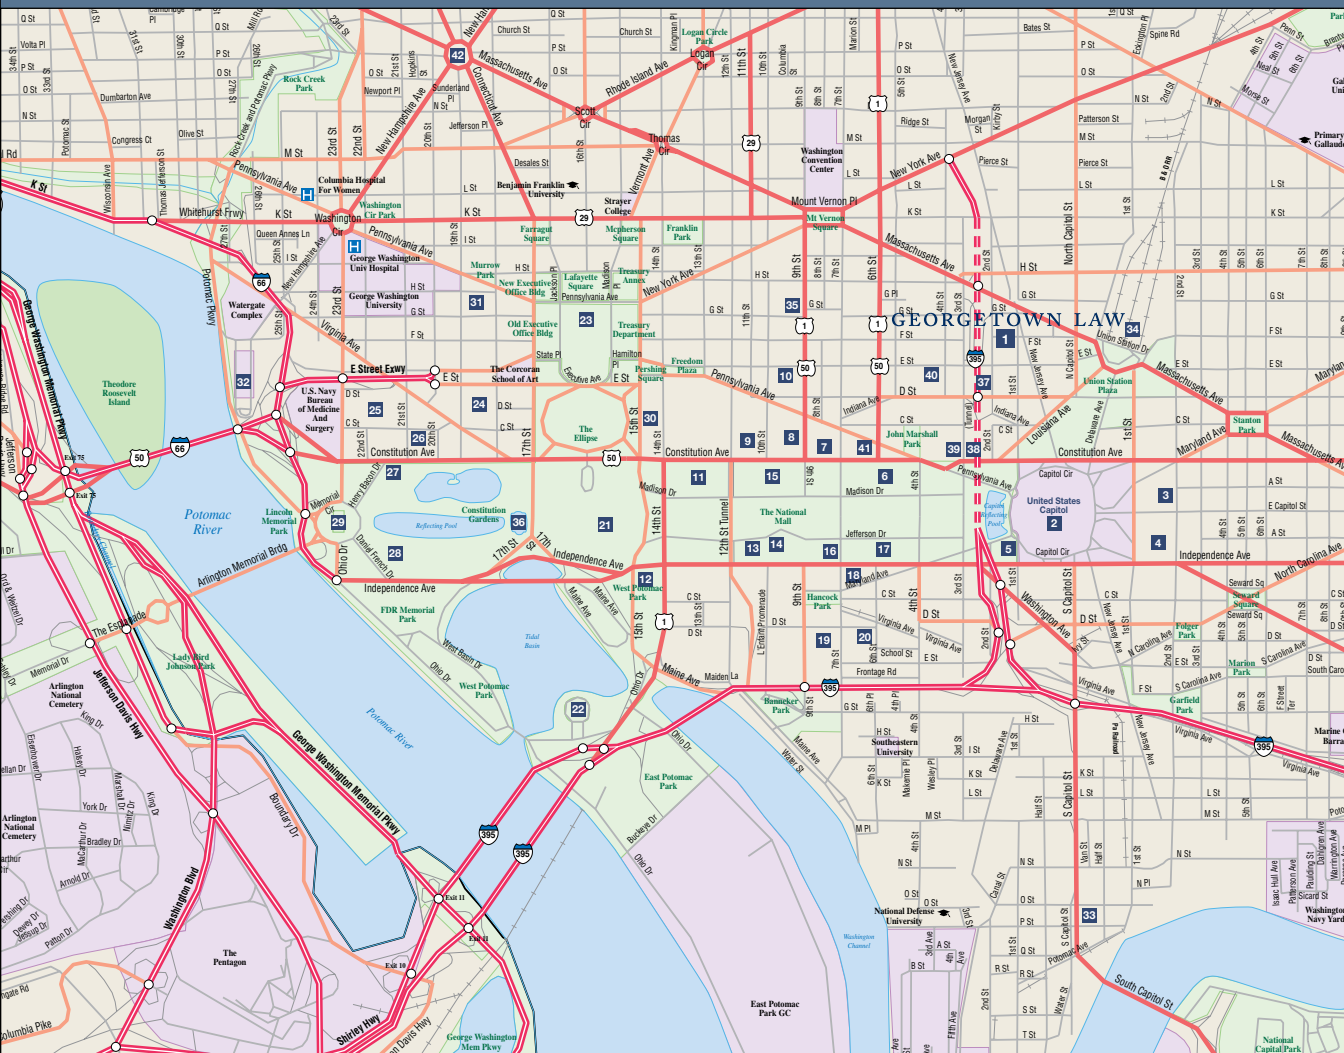

Georgetown Law only requires one letter of recommendation to apply to the JD program, although additional letters will be accepted.

If possible, recommendations should be completed by faculty members with personal knowledge of the applicant's academic work. Recommendations from employers are also acceptable. We recommend that letters be submitted through the LSAC Letter of Recommendation Service, included with your LSDAS Registration subscription.

Individual letters may, however, be sent directly to Georgetown Law.

Note: An application is considered "complete" after receipt of all other required materials and one letter of recommendation. It will be forwarded to the Committee at that time; however, if you would like the Committee to consider additional recommendations before rendering a decision, please contact the Office of Admissions in writing at admis@law.georgetown.edu and ask that your application be held until additional recommendation(s) are received.
